

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A computer program is provided which intellectually stimulates a user during the running a base computer program. The secondary computer program interrupts the base computer program at set time intervals, providing questions to the user for answering. The user's answers are checked for correctness, where correct answers can result in the secondary computer program rewarding the user and incorrect answers can result in the secondary computer program penalizing the user.